

EMPLOYEE CLAIM ASSISTANCE FOLLOWING CATASTROPHIC HURRICANES

Hurricanes can devastate regions, economies, and most significantly people. The flood and other damage caused to homes, businesses, and infrastructure — on top of the storm’s personal and psychological impacts — may linger for weeks, months, or even years. As companies begin their recovery efforts following such catastrophic events, they need to focus their attention on their most valuable asset — their employees. One way organizations can help their employees through such difficult time is by providing them with the tools and advice to navigate unfamiliar claims processes.

Marsh Risk Consulting (MRC) and Marsh Claims Advocacy, with combined deep expertise in claims issues and catastrophic event crisis management, can provide the support your employees need to navigate claim processes as quickly as possible and to minimize disruption to their lives and your business.

HOW MARSH CAN HELP

While each component of effective crisis preparation and response is critical, it is often the human side of a disaster — particularly the impact on employees and their families — that is the most difficult to manage. Ultimately, it may be the most important factor in returning your organization to some semblance of business as usual.

As those affected by a hurricane or other natural disaster quickly discover, coping with the aftermath takes time and knowledge of how to report claims to FEMA, state agencies, and private insurance. Interacting with federal agencies or insurance companies in the best of times can be challenging; having to deal with them during an emergency is even more stressful. Furthermore, the effort it takes often translates into time away from work.

Our goal is to ease the burden on your employees through expert guidance as to their available opportunities and options for receiving insurance and other benefits.

We can assist your employees directly by providing:

- Guidance around private insurance benefits reporting processes.
- Claims documentation advice to expedite the private insurance payment process.
- Information on the opportunities and options for receiving federal public assistance (grants and/or loans) for temporary housing, home repair, or replacement.

- General advice on how to mitigate further damages.

We accomplish this through the establishment of a dedicated assistance line with a local number, which is staffed by Marsh's claim professionals during the work week and, as necessary, on weekends and holidays. Employees receive a call back from one of our claim professionals within two working hours.

We have helped companies during previous storms to accelerate employees' and their own claims and recovery. We also have supported employers with a range of resiliency and recovery strategies and solutions following natural disasters such as hurricanes Katrina, Rita, Harvey, and Irma, and Superstorm Sandy.
